The Commonwealth Medical Trust (Commat) works in the areas of sexual and reproductive health and the right to health and medical ethics. In its activities it pays special attention to the impact of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) on sexual and reproductive health. During the past year Commat has begun to decentralize its activities to Uganda, Pakistan and India and is setting up national level 'Commats' in these countries. Its evidence is limited to Uganda and Pakistan in which activities have already been started.

In addition the evidence has been prepared by Marianne Haslegrave, its Director, who was the Consultant on Partnerships with NGOs on SRH, for the UN Millennium Project.
